UPS with Lithium-Ion batteries offer power protection to critical equipment in edge, distributed IT applications and data center. They last 2-3 times longer than those with lead-acid batteries, resulting in fewer battery replacements and lower labor costs.

Furthermore, an average Li-ion battery has an operational life of around 8 to 10 years, while lead acid batteries usually last around 4 years. A lithium ion battery pack provides more energy per kilogram of weight than VRLA. Hence, Li-ion batteries only require about a third of the space as VRLA-based solutions while delivering the same power.

While lead acid batteries, particularly Valve-Regulated Lead Acid (VRLA) batteries, remain the energy storage technology of choice in conventional uninterruptible power supply (UPS) systems, they have drawbacks across their battery life, backup and operating costs.

What is a Lithium-Ion Battery Backup UPS? Uninterruptible power supply, or UPS, is a device that provides power backup to IT equipment when power completely fails or drops low enough. Some types of uninterruptible power supply provide just enough time for a computer to save what the user is doing and power down while some can provide ...
